EXISTING BRAND POSITIONING:

The Overly Companies, otherwise known as Overly Construction Group, is comprised of three subsidiary entities: Overly Site Amenities, Brico, and Regal Walls. Currently, only OSA has a website (osa-tx.com).

As positioned, osa-tx.com is split between OSA and its parent OCG. That is, while the site showcase OSA's projects and services, it is branded under the holding company OCG. This creates serious brand confusion, inhibiting the impact of both entities, as well as the other Overly Companies which have not yet come to the web.

It was originally scoped to build to build two websites, one for OSA, and one for OCG. The idea was to provide OSA its own site with its own identity, while still giving OCG a site to promote it's three companies. While OSA most definitely needs its own identity, basically a rebranding and redesign of osa-tx.com, the establishment of a separate website for OCG is problematic on two fronts. One, Overly doesn't really do business under the OCG name therefor diminishing the need of brand positioning of its own; and two, the resources could be better spent on setting up Brico, a construction services company that is attempting to expand its operations into the residential market.
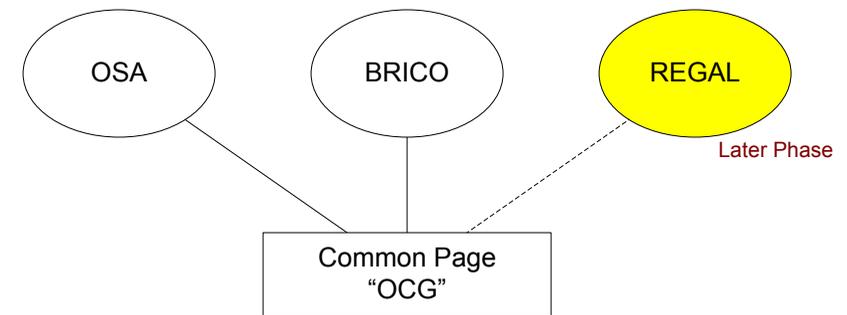

RECOMMENDED BRAND POSITIONING:

The objective is to create a growth-ready structure whereby additional OCG companies can be brought online, while still giving OCG itself limited exposure as a holding company. Each company within OCG umbrella will support its own brand, on its own website while linking to separate instances of a common page that provides basic information on all the various OCG enterprises.

Under this recommendation, each subsidiary of OCG will adhere to a common website structure in terms of general template design, navigation and functionality, while distinguishing itself from the other via stylistic differences, and content. To date, Regal Walls is not within scope, though can also adopt the basic design construct in a later phase.

BRAND CONSIDERATIONS:

OSA and BRICO have nearly identical brand characteristics. Both are "warm", and "traditional" promoting a "family-orientated" sense of security and well-being." The most major distinctions between them are in each of their respective service offerings. OSA specializing in the commercial amenities market, providing turn key construction for amenity centers, pools, and casual outdoor living environments, while BRICO concentrates on high quality fencing, trellises, etc. in both commercial and residential markets.

Since OSA is 95% commercial, and BRICO is essentially divided between commercial and residential, residential being a strategic growth area for OCG, the brands may need to be conveyed slightly differently from one another in terms of overall voice and aesthetic appeal. While both are indeed warm and more traditional, OSA could definitely adopt a more professional presentation while allowing BRICO more of a "down home", "earthy" presentation. This of course, is at the discretion of the designer and subject to client approval.

EXISTING NAVIGATION (OCG/OSA)

HOME (LOGO)	ABOUT	CLIENT LIST	CONSULTING	DESIGN	BUILD	PROJECTS	NEWS	CONTACT

PROPOSED NAVIGATION (OSA)

| HOME (LOGO)	ABOUT	SERVICES	PROJECTS	NEWS	CONTACT

NOTE: OSA specializes in Design/Build, which encompasses Consulting, Design and Building, currently broken out separately in the main navigation. Under the new construct, these services will be broken into sub-headings with the understanding that "Consulting" equally applies to Design/Build services as well as Bid List Contracts.

PROPOSED NAVIGATION (BRICO)

| HOME (LOGO)	ABOUT (Who We Are)	SERVICES (What We Do)	PROJECTS (Our Work)	NEWS (Our Voice)	CONTACT
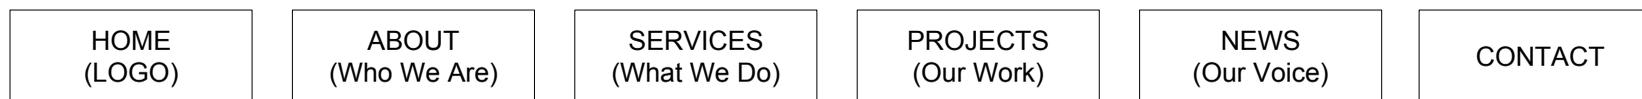

NOTE: BRICO may assume a softer presentation than that of OSA, and possible employ alternate navigation labels. Above illustrates what some of these labels may be though a copy writer will need to make final recommendations. Note that the number of navigation points, and indeed the intent of those corresponding pages, remains consistent from OSA.

GLOBAL HEADER
Desktop Headers typically consist of a logo, tagline, and one or more navigation sets and/or Utilities (social links, search bar, login options, etc.). More modern headers may overlap large images/videos; hide/appear on scrolling, or even apply alternate design treatments such as logo animation.

MAIN BODY
The Main Body contains all contextually-related copy, imagery, imbeds, CTAs, and any additional navigation constructs necessary to the wayfinding of information. Page layouts, commonly referred as templates, may be static, called remotely via scripting, and/or dynamically introduced through a CMS backend. In addition, many templates employ a responsive treatment allowing objects within a grid to stack and reconfigure based on the users browsing device..

SIDE NAVIGATION
Some webpages may use a side navigation. Horizontal navigation or linking from within the copy is also quite common. Specific navigation methods require careful sitemap planning and special consideration to how the means will translate to the mobile user.

GLOBAL FOOTER
Like the Header, the Footer contains global navigation sets (which may or may not be redundant to the main navigation), along with direct links to special secondary pages. Legal information, links to offsite domains and copyright information are also quite typical.

MOBILE DEVICE SCALING

Depending on the design, it may not be necessary to scale from Desktop (read conventional computer or laptop), to Tablet Device. Sometime elimination of page margins alone is all that's required
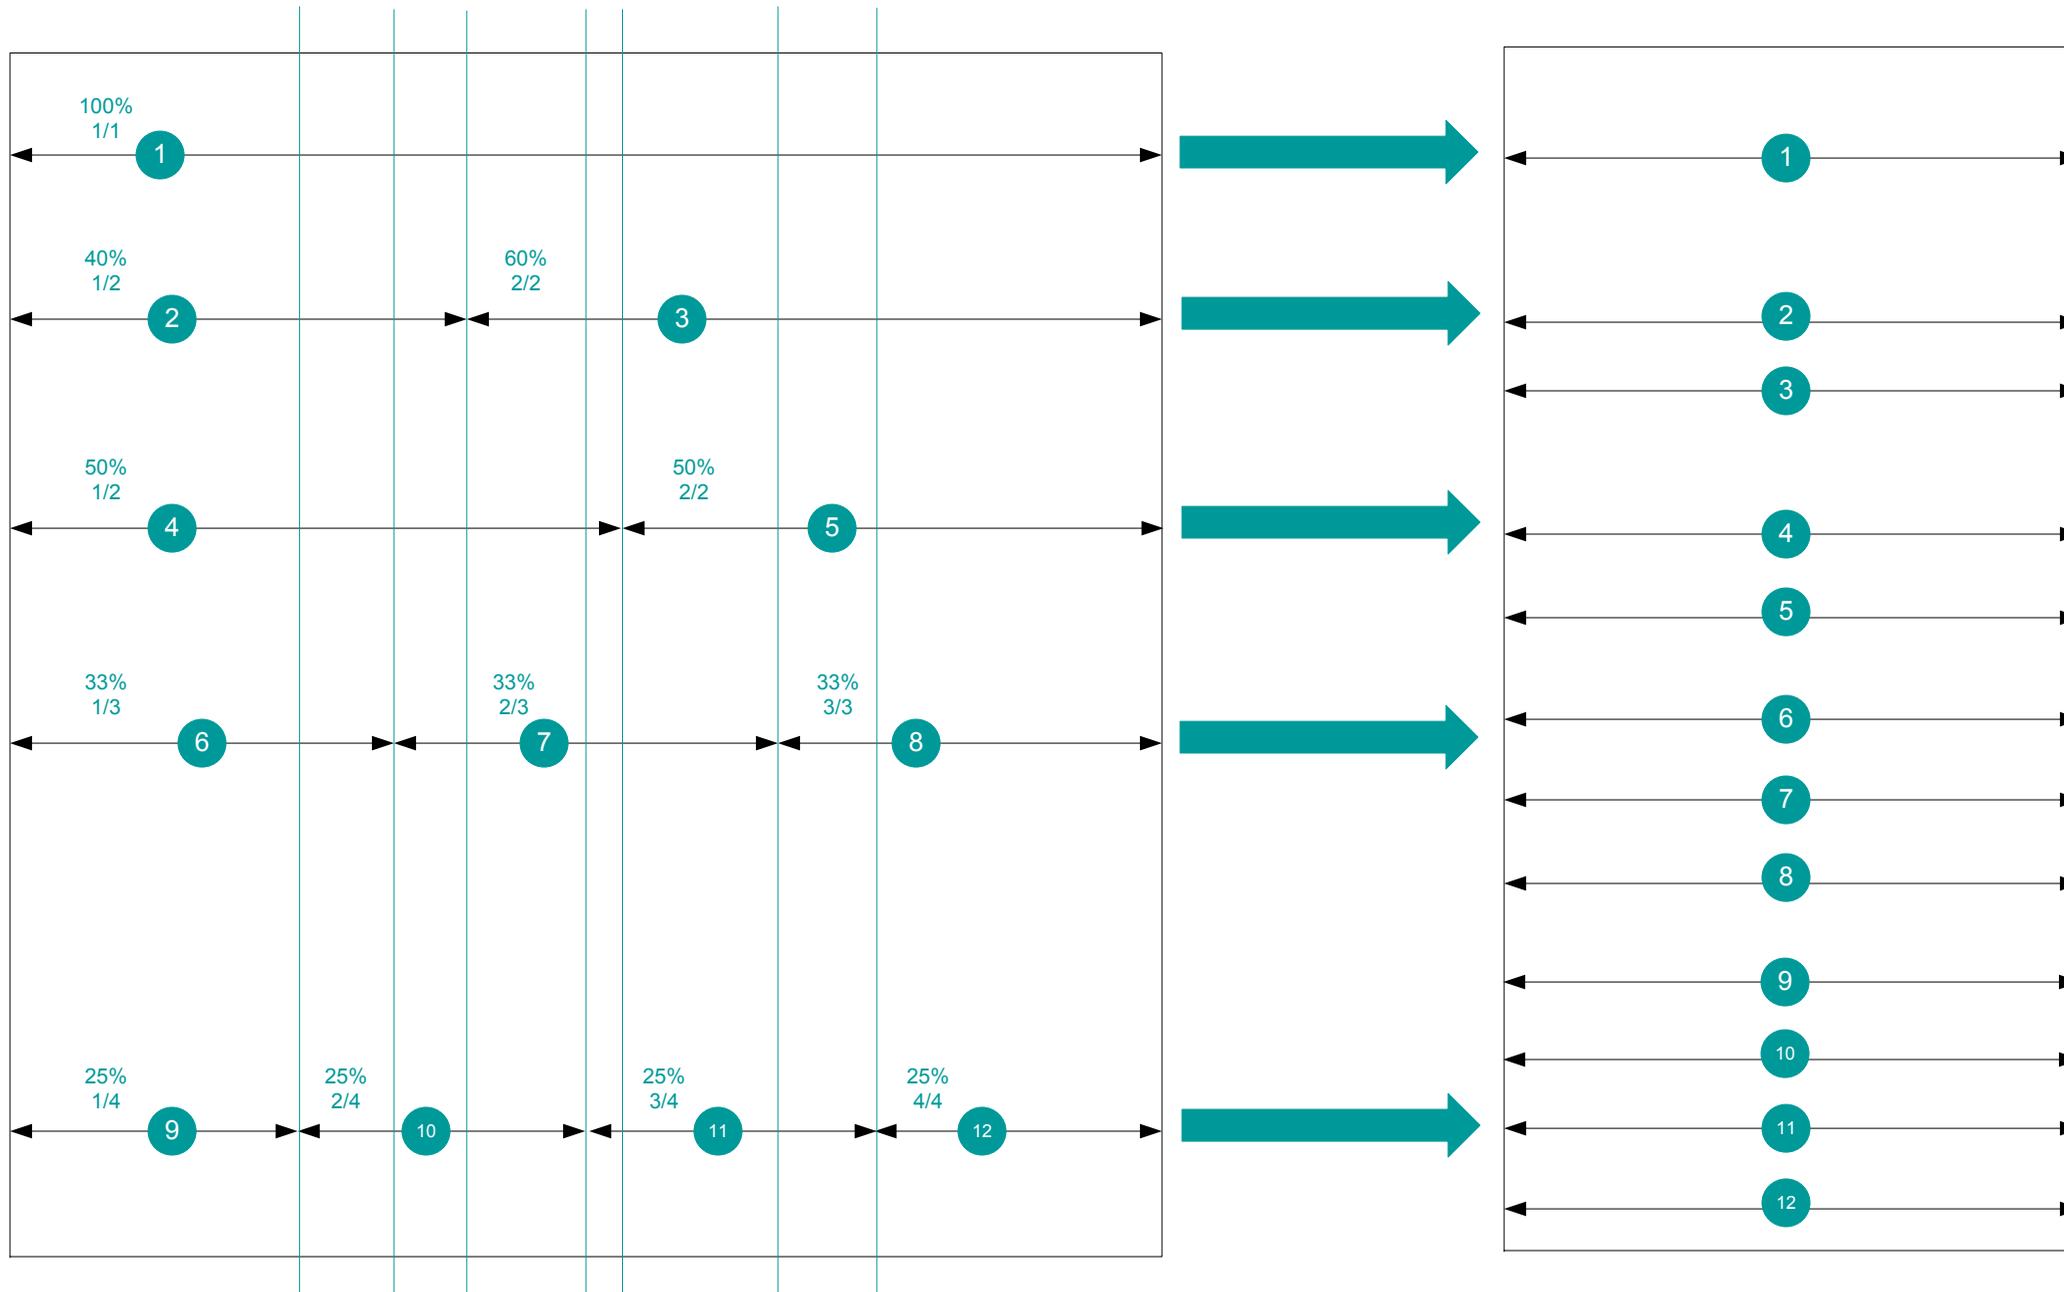

Mobile (read smartphone) will assume a restructured means of navigation, combining common header and footer attributes while "responsively" restructuring the page information, and employing new design attributes more conducive to mobile usage.

SERVICES
Services are divided into three categories: Consulting, Design, and Development. Content for these areas will likely be expanded from their current version, and may introduce imagery along with content. In such instances, imagery will be afforded a separate row below the content adhering to the same width as the text within its section.

Brico Services are more extensive than OSA's dividing the page into two sections, one for Commercial and one for Residential. Residential will be listed on the top, with subheadings for Fencing, Patio Covers, Kitchen Fireplace Settings, etc. while Commercial subheadings will include Fencing, Shade Structures, and Trellis'. A thorough content audit / brand evaluation will more accurately define the listings.

COMPANIES (33% 1x3)
OCG Companies will be handled similar to the way services are handled on each subsidiary Home Page. Rather than iconography however, logos will be used, and the text within each section stands to be much longer. These sections are designed to highlight each company's main service offerings, while identifying their target market and general area of expertise. Selection of any particular company will redirect the user to that company's corresponding website (in a separate browser window), with the exception of Regal Walls which will come later.
